It would be uncanded, and therefore comminst in a very high degree in this Assembly, in conducting this correspondence, to attempt to disguise the fact that they to day, after an experience of more than haif a century, do adhere most sincerely to the faith of our fathers.

Whatever anxiety or willingness there may be on the part of the Church represented by this Assembly for organic union, results most certainly not from any dissatisfaction either with the doctrines or usages of the Church, but purely from other causes.

Perfect unity in opinion is not to be expected among men on any subject, and slight shades of doctrinal differences doubtless exist; but it is fully believed that there is less doctrinal disparmony in this church than in any other body of Christians of equal numbers. Many of our fathers were reared up in the Presbyterian church; they loved the time-honored standards of that church, and in changing their ecclesiastical status carried with them as a patrimumial inheritance everything which they deemed vital to the new organization. Their sons also find in these time-honored standards many things which they reversely the property of the court, capt.
